1. COMMON DESCRIPTION AND THE STRUCTURE OF FACULTY

Faculty of Sociology and Law (FSL) offers training at one of the most famous and rating world universities (according to the international ratings QS and Webometrics). Modern methods of teaching, close ties with employers, training of the best students in the employer's firms, the practice of international student exchanges, meetings and communication with well-known sociologists and lawyers from Poland, USA, Germany, and the CIS countries - these are just some of the benefits of an education at the faculty. The academic staff of faculty includes leading experts in the field of sociology, political science, law, and public administration. They have great experience in research, teaching, and practice both in Ukraine and abroad.

Structure

1. Department of Theory and Practice of Management trains professionals with a degree in "Public Management and Administration" (educational programs/specializations: "Administrative management" and "E-governance").

In course of theoretical classes and practical training, students carry out sociological research, develop their social projects and social technologies. It promotes the formation of skills mix of theory and practice, creative lifestyle.

methods of administration but also the design and reconstruction of both administrative systems and the administrative activity itself following the needs of modern society.

With this knowledge, the graduates are in demand in the labor market, being able to work in the fields of public administration and policy, PR, and HR, in commercial and non-profit organizations and institutions.

2. Department of Sociology trains professionals with a degree in Sociology (educational program/specialization "Conflict Resolution and Mediation").

The sociologist is a specialist in the field of a theoretical and empirical study of social life in its entity, the social structures and processes, communities and their interaction, the socio-political dynamics of society, the social fundamentals of economic behavior, and cultural dimensions of social development. The social worker is a specialist in social assistance to various categories of the population.

While studying at the Magistracy students have educational and diploma practice at the leading enterprises and institutions of higher education following the selected direction of research.

3. Department of Information Law and Intellectual Property Rights and Teaching and Research Center for Information Law and Legal Issues of Information Technology were established in 2013.

The operation of this innovative project provides training professionals with a degree in Law (educational program/specialization "Information Law and Intellectual Property Rights").

Department's alumni work in public institutions and commercial companies that operate in all sectors of industry and production

Today only a few scientists researched the field of information law in Ukraine. For this reason, an important task of the Department and the Centre was to provide training not only students of bachelor's and master level of higher education in the field of information law but also the future teachers of information and legal disciplines.
